About Writing One's Name.

People who sign their letters with wild flourishes, or initials only, and give no address, offer one of the worst of compliments to their correspondent by egotistically assuming that their handwriting must be of such familiar importance to him, or that they and their affairs are so present to his mind that further identification is unnecessary. Having their signature cut from the end of a letter, and the address from its heading pasted on the envelope which incloses a reply, is a bad compliment which many persons bring upon themselves by an unpardonable illegibility. It is a singular fact the accidental mis spelling or mispronunciation of one's name generally constitutes a greater affront and is provocative of more annovance than a studied insult.-All the Year Round.

Germany's Celebrated Library.

In Germany, fifty of the largest libraries have a total of 12,700,000 volumes; in this country the same number of libraries have 6,100,000 volumes, and in England 6,450,000. One hundred and twenty-five librarians and assistants are employed in the celebrated Mudie's circulating library in London. The proprictor, Mr. Charles Mudie, who died at the age of 72, founded the library thirtytwo years ago, and it has now 25,000 sub scribers. Its annual income is £100,000, -New York Ledger.

Sitting Bull's Pipe. George Connor has in his possession a relic which he prizes very highly. It is nothing less than a pipe which Sitting Bull had in his possession when killed. It was sent to Mr. Connor by an ac-club and had just returned from a visit to the famous "Sorosis." She had been telling them what questions were discassed and what was the programme of the evening. There were a number of women present, and they had all been very much interested.

The president sat down in her-chair and waited for questions. There was a silence for an instant, and finally a-timid voice from the background said:

"I would like to ask a question. Was it-was it a dressy crowd?" The president jumped up andstaid:

"I just want to tell you! Those ladies all had on the most beautiful bonnets. One was a heliotrope velvet trimmed with gold lace. And another was made of bands of jet and pink roses" (the ladies commenced to gather around her with enraptured expressions). "The handsomest of all was worn by Mrs. --.

Just then the president of this woman's club caught a smile on the face of a newspaper correspondent who was present. She drew herself up with great dignity and said:

"Ladies, I think we are wandering from the subject." The ladies settled back, conscious of the superior advantages of this popular club, but with a fleeting expression of disappointment, that gave indication of a willingness to "wander" still farther. Chicago Herald.

Latest Use for the Child's Hair. When Dotty Dimple has her first thatch of long curls cropped off her mother doesn't gather them up one by one as she used to do, and lay them carefully away in a long box with an incription some thing like this on the outside, "Dotty's curls, cut off when she was 5 years old." She gathers them up, to be sure, and carries them away with her, but the next day or so she is seen going into a certain hairdresser's in Twenty-third street, where a notice prominently displayed in the window reads, "Dolls' Wigs Made Here." And Dotty Dimple goes with her, of course, and carries Rosamond Arabella or Fifine, or whatever the name may be of the potential little lady in bisque. And in a box the mother carries the curls. Then the attendant gravely measures the bisque pate after he has first removed the shock of flax flat covered it, and looks wise over the box of curis and says, "Oh, yes, madam, there will be plenty of them, I think." Madam and Dotty Diraple go away after a great many lowing pats and admonitions, and in a few days Rosamond Arabella comes home no longer with the flaxen pate, but wearing a lovely blonde wig of real hair -hair that curis up about her temples and down her back just as Dotty Dimple's own does. And that is just what it is, Dotty Dimple's own severed curls. And thus are the demands of sentiment and fashion united.-New York Evening Sun.

A Queer Deer. Mr. Arnell, while cutting timber one-day north of the city, came upon a petrified deer. He brought it home with him and has it on exhibition. It is the root of a tree, twisted and gnaried into a most striking likeness to a deer, with its four legs, neck, head, body, ears and even hours complete.-Gray's Harbor (Ore.) Times.
